

COMPLAINS OF HER FATHER.

Lizzie Costello Says Her Home Is Unfit to Live In.

Justice Welde Makes Him Give the Girl Her Property.

Lizzie Costello, sixteen years old, a granddaughter of the late Deputy Sheriff Barney Costello, appeared before Justice Welde, in the Harlem Police Court, this morning, as complainant against her father, William Costello, of 23 East One Hundred and Twentieth street. Lizzie told the Justice that eleven years ago her mother died. Since that time her father has been living with a woman to whom he says he is married. She frequently drinks to excess.

Lizzie says her home is unfit for her to live in. She says she is willing to shift for herself. She has been living with an aunt for the greater part of the past ten years, but said that her father would always come after her and make her go home with him.

The first wife of ex-Sheriff Jimmy O'Brien and Lizzie's mother were sisters. At her death a few years ago, Mrs. O'Brien left a house at Thirteenth-fourth street and Park avenue to three of her sister's children. The house was sold and the money put in trust with the Manhattan Trust Company. The children were to receive the interest on this money.

The widow bad Lizzie's papers all along, and the girl and her aunt told the Justice he had used part of the money on himself. The amount in trust for Lizzie was about $1,000.

She was an exceedingly bright and determined girl and told the Justice she was willing to let her father have the papers if he would give her the property. Justice Welde, however, compelled the father to hand over the papers to the girl.

O'Brien made no denial of his daughter's statement, and surrendered the papers without protest. He was a clerk in the Sheriff's office while his father was deputized, and for some time after his father's death.

Since then, Agent Moore, of Gerry's Society, who investigated the case said the widow had done nothing but nothing. He spent most of his time at the race tracks and the saloons.

JUDGE CHASES A PRISONER.

The Fellow Pled From a Court in Matamoras, Pa.

(By Associated Press)

MIDDLETON, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Matamoras is a little village in Pennsylvania just across the Delaware from Port Jervis. Judge Balch presides over the court there. A young man who had been arrested for abusing his parents was taken before him Wednesday for examination. Court Officer Totten left him hanging by his wrists and sent him back to look for a witness, and the prisoner started off on a run. Judge Balch sprang to the door, but only reached it in time to close it behind the prisoner's coat tails.

The latter bound down the steps on the jump, and the Judge, not able to hold up his big gun, ran across a board on the ceiling man called him to halt. There was a heroic ring in his voice, and the prisoner stopped abruptly in his headlong flight. He returned to the courtroom without a word.

CONVICT KILLS A DEPUTY.

Shoots Him in a Georgia Jail—Five Prisoners Escape.

(By Associated Press)

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Feb. 23.—Deputy Sheriff Tom Singletary left last night of a pistol shot wounded by Edward Kibbemier, who was in charge of the jail, and at supper time went in to see about the feeding of the prisoners. As he did so one of the prisoners ordered him to hold up his hands, and Singletary told him with an anchor bar.

Singer grabbed the Sheriff's pistol, and turning upon him shot him in the heart. The other prisoners then escaped. A posse with guns and dogs went in pursuit of the men, who are likely to be lynched if caught.

STABBED WITH A PENKNIFE.

Mallabista's Curiosity Got Him Into Trouble.

Edward Kibbemier, twenty-six years old, of 68 East Sixteenth street, was accused in Essex Market Court to-day of stabbing Charles Mallabista, of 67 Ludlow street, in the abdomen with a penknife. Mallabista found a large crowd of persons gathered at Delaney and Clark streets, and when asked what he wanted to see it was all about and was told Kibbemier cut his way. This showed Kibbemier, and he drew his pocket knife and stabbed Mallabista. Kibbemier fled and was追捕 by a crowd of three hundred persons. Justice Hogan held him for trial in detail of $500 bail.

Bloodhounds to Track Thieves.

(By Associated Press)

ANDERSON, Ind., Feb. 23.—The farmers of the Indiana gas belt have organized detective associations for the apprehension of criminals. The organization, headed by Sheriff G. H. Miller, has heretofore refused to surrender his authority and Rev. J. R. Drake, president of the Presbyterians to take his place. He is to reduce to day to await a judicial settlement of the affair at the April term of court.
